

JUDGE SEWARD REFUSES TO OBEY CIRCUIT COURT

Action Unprecedented in Annals of Licking County Litigation That Lower Court Should Counter Higher One

IN ORDERING PRISONERS ADMITTED TO BAIL

Attorneys for Men Confined in County Jail Take Quick Action and File Habeas Corpus Suits, Saturday Afternoon to be Heard at Special Session of Circuit Court Monday.

Writs of habeas corpus in the cases of Art Dover and Edgar Owens were filed this afternoon in the circuit court, and that court will be in Newark by special appointment Monday morning at 9 o'clock, to hear them.

Judge C. W. Seward, in common pleas court Saturday morning, refused to obey a writ of mandamus directed to him by the circuit court, and for a time the atmosphere about the court house was surcharged with latent forces that threatened at any moment to break into a storm, the like of which has never been known before in the annals of Licking county litigation.

The matter came to a focus when Attorney Edward Kibler arose and asked Judge Seward to fix the amount of bond for Art Dover at $2500 in each indictment, which charges murder in connection with the lynching of Carl Etherington.

The circuit court had issued a peremptory writ of mandamus on Friday, commanding Judge Seward to admit Dover to bail in the amounts stated above, and the writ was placed in the hands of Sheriff Slabaugh for service, to make his return on or before April 24.

The same writ had issued in the cases against Edgar Owens, who is represented by Attorneys Jones & Jones.

Judge Seward told Mr. Kibler in response to his request to admit Dover to bail, in accordance with the writ of mandamus, that he was not ready to take action "at this time," as no return had been made by the sheriff of the service of the writ to the clerk of the circuit court, E. M. Larson.

Mr. Kibler then asked that an entry be made of his application, and this also was refused, as was a request to make an entry of the court's refusal to take the action asked, so that it could be made a matter of record.

All of these requests were refused by Judge Seward, who said that he was "inclined to test the validity of the circuit court's action in causing the writ to issue."

Prosecutor Phil B. Smith was present and suggested that there was no return of the sheriff, and that there was nothing at present before the court, but the attorneys for the men in jail insisted upon immediate action.

The writ had been served on Judge Seward by Sheriff Slabaugh, but for some reason he had failed to make a return, and the attorneys took immediate action to have the sheriff make this return right away, intending, as one of them said, "if he then refuses, we will file proceedings in contempt and have him (Judge Seward) put in jail."

Messrs. Jones & Jones, Kibler and J. R. Fitzgibbon then had a stormy session with Sheriff Slabaugh, urging him to make an immediate return of the writ.

The following is a copy of the order of the circuit court, granting the peremptory writ:

State of Ohio, Licking County, Circuit Court.

The State of Ohio, on Relation of Edgar Owen, Relator, Plaintiff, vs.

Chas. W. Seward, as Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Licking County, Ohio, Respondent, Defendant.

ENTRY.

And now comes the relator and moves the court for the allowance of a writ of mandamus herein, and on consideration the court finds the relator's right to require the performance of the act hereinafter commanded to be clear, and that no valid excuse can be given for not performing

INTERVIEW WITH CARDINAL GIBBONS ON OUR INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT

Baltimore, Md., April 15.—"An important condition in the industrial development of this country," said Cardinal Gibbons in an interview here today, "is the fact that the right of the people to fair and honest treatment by the big business interests is daily becoming more widely recognized by broad-minded and progressive men. Laws are being passed and enforced for the proper regulation and control of great corporations, particularly public service companies, and the rights of the people are each year being better guarded and protected. This is as it should be; it creates honesty in business relations, and without honesty there can be no real progress."

"It was said recently by Theodore N. Vail, the head of the great telephone and telegraph interest, that the public should be considered as virtual partners in all matters that pertain to the common welfare. Therefore, he says, he believes that there should be proper control and regulation of public service companies. This attitude from a man representing 70,000 stockholders is indicative of the progressive spirit of the times—it shows a broad appreciation of the rights of the people."

"The public has a right to exercise intelligent control over corporations which serve it with necessities. No friends of his race can contemplate without painful emotions, heartless monopolists exhibiting a grasping avarice which has dried up every sentiment of sympathy in the public and created a sordid selfishness which is deaf to cries of justice and fair treatment."

"Public control and regulation will prevent such conditions. The healthy combination of human forces in the economic world can accomplish results which could not be effected by any individual efforts. Our industrial progress is so vast that great combinations of capital are now necessary forces in our business life. Many of these corporations have created the public unfairly, many have been unjustly criticized by the public. There would be greater harmony, more benefits and less ground for complaint if everybody would keep in view the golden maxim of the gospel: 'Whatsoever you would that men should do unto you, do ye also unto them.'"

"The people deserve fair and honest treatment, and in return they should treat the big business interests justly. Public control and regulation should be such as to assure the people good service at fair prices and should also protect the investor; it should prevent destructive industrial warfare, for the people in the end pay for such strife; it should end improper political interference with the rights of the people and with the enforcement of unjust decisions; it should encourage honest effort to serve the people with the utilities which they require, and at the same time furnish proper protection to the men who invest their money in the effort to do so."

RANKS WERE DIVIDED ON AMENDMENT

But Party Whip Kept Democrats in Line and Bill Passed

THE PUBLICITY MEASURE

Will Require the Publication of All Campaign Contributions Before Election.

Washington, April 15.—The Democratic majority in the house got its wires badly crossed yesterday during the consideration of the campaign publicity bill.

At the close of a session marked by insurgency in the Democratic ranks, by reason of which the Republicans narrowly missed scoring a triumph, the house passed the Rucker bill for the publicity of campaign contributions before election.

The fight arose over the extent to which publicity should be applied. But for the vigorous and continued use of the Democratic party whip an important Republican amendment extending publicity to the individual receipts and expenses of candidates for congress would have been retained in the bill when finally it was passed.

As it was the amendment was adopted over the protest of the Democratic leaders by the support of 52 of the Democrats, who voted with the solid Republican strength.

Resort to a parliamentary move enabled the Democrats later to get rid of the amendment, but 28 of their number refused to change their attitude and stuck with the Republicans in opposing the Democratic majority.

The Rucker bill passed by a unanimous vote but only after a stormy scene. The amendment offered by Representative Jackson, a new Republican member from Kansas, required all candidates for congress to file statements of the source and use of their individual campaign funds, in both the primary and general elections.

The amendment met instant support from the Republican side and encountered the opposition of the Democratic leaders. Mr. Rucker, of Missouri, chairman of the committee in charge of the bill, asserted that it would so change the form of the law that it might endanger its final passage.

This did not deter 52 Democrats from supporting the Jackson amendment. They, with the solid Republican forces, gave the amendment a majority that resulted in its adoption, 172 to 131, and the announcement of the vote was followed by a storm of applause from the Republican side.

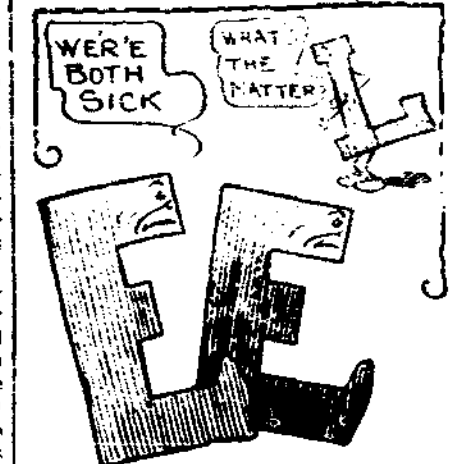

There was a hurried conference of Democratic leaders as the progress of the vote showed the success of the amendment. As soon as the vote was announced Mr. Rucker moved to recommit the bill with its new amendment to the elections committee, with instructions to that committee to send the bill back to the house without the Jackson amendment.

This parliamentary move to squeeze the amendment out of the bill brought about a split in the ranks of the Democrats who had favored the Jackson amendment. Twenty-eight of them stood by their former action and voted against the motion to recommit the bill, but the Democratic leaders mustered enough votes to carry their point, 157 to 149, and the bill technically was sent back to the committee.

Mr. Rucker gathered the members

POWERS-MILLER SALE CONFIRMED; J. J. CARROLL WILL AT ONCE TAKE CHARGE, AND SELL STOCK

The sale of the Powers-Miller store, which includes all the stock, furniture, etc., to Mr. John J. Carroll, by Receiver E. Cary Norris, was confirmed by Judge Sater of the United States Federal court at Columbus on Friday afternoon, and the money, $54,600, was paid over to the receiver by Mr. Carroll on Saturday morning.

To an Advocate after Saturday morning Mr. Carroll said that it was his intention to place a large force of people in the store Monday morning in order to get the stock cleaned up and placed in salable condition. This, it is thought, will take a week or ten days to accomplish. Anything is in readiness a bankruptcy will be commenced in the rooms occupied by the store. Mr. Carroll said that he proposed to give the citizens of Newark and Licking county the benefit of the low price at which the stock of goods was bought, and that he expected to have the entire stock closed out in from forty to sixty days. The rooms of the entire six floors of the building will then be put in first class shape after which Mr. Carroll will move his old store to the Hull building where he aims to have one of the largest and best stocked stores in Central Ohio. Mr. Carroll will certainly have the best wishes of all the people of the county for increased patronage, and prosperity in his new undertaking, for it is to such men that success comes.

It is understood that Mr. Carroll is negotiating for a long term lease on the Hull building.

ATTORNEY GENERAL HOGAN TO PUSH PROBES AND SUITS LEFT BY DENMAN

Columbus, April 15.—The appointment last year by Attorney-General Grant Denman and Henry J. Booth at Jackson, as special counsel in the canal investigation case is regarded as an earnest that Attorney-General Hogan intends to carry into execution his intention of finishing the inquiry by the information of the General Assembly.

Nothing, however, has been received from these investigators, despite the fact that open hearings were had and a number of witnesses examined as to the charges preferred by Chief Engineer James Marker of the State Board of Public Works.

The officials accused in these charges have strenuously denied the truth of the allegations and have asserted that they rested upon partisan malice. Mr. Denman has since passed into private life and is awaiting confirmation as United States District Attorney, which is taken to mean that he has severed his connection with the matter.

Attorney-General Hogan has addressed himself to the cleaning up of the cases he found pending upon his induction, among them the suit to oust the Hocking Valley Railway combination and the subsidiary companies of the Standard Oil company, both of which were carried over from the regime of Wade H. Ellis.

He is also working on the test suits against underlying corporations which are constituents of merged public service companies for the collection of the capital stock taxes amounting to millions of dollars.

Mr. McGillivray will take up the work where General Denman left it off.

CHARGED WITH KILLING FATHER

Providence, Ky., April 15.—Thompson Thompson, aged 18, was arrested for the second time charged with the willful murder of his father, Henry Thompson, whose body was found in a ravine near here the day after Christmas. Thompson was arrested at the high school here yesterday afternoon, asked to be taken to his home, where he kissed his mother and two sisters good bye and was taken to Dixon, where he was placed in jail. He was refused bond.

YEGGS LEAVE LOOT BEHIND

Washington, D. C., April 15.—Yeggs demolished the outer door of the big safe at the Standard Oil Company's office with a charge of nitroglycerin about midnight, according to the night operator at the Dayton, Toledo and Trenton depot, near by, who stepped out to investigate. Evidently thinking he had called the police, the Yeggs left without setting the big lot of money inside.

FIRE DAMAGES SWITCHBOARD. Fremont, April 15.—Fire last evening did damage to the extent of $1000 to the switchboard in the Fremont Home Telephone Exchange and temporarily cut 2000 telephones out of commission.

NAVY AVIATOR FATAALLY HURT. Charente, France, April 15.—Lieutenant Byasson of the navy, while making an aeroplane flight here yesterday, fell with his machine and was mortally injured.

PRESIDENT HAS ISSUED A WARNING

Mexicans Must Not Fight Near the Border Line

ASSURES PROTECTION

In the Future to Citizens Living Along Border—Mexico Will be Requested to Pay Indemnity.

Douglas, Ariz., April 15.—If a single bullet whistles across the international line during the impending battle between Mexicans and federal United States troops will at once intervene. This ultimatum was delivered to the rebels today by Captain Gaujot, commanding the United States cavalry here and to the approaching federals. Gaujot acted under orders from Washington. On his return here he telegraphed for reinforcements so as to be ready to back up his ultimatum if the need arises.

The federal column approaching is reliably reported to number 1200 and the rebel garrison numbers 1100. Goupot also issued a warning to all Mexicans that if caught on American soil they would be held prisoners until the revolution ends. If the federals attack from the south with machine guns it will be almost impossible to keep a rain of lead from hitting Douglas.

Washington, April 15.—Repetition of the firing of Douglas, Ariz., will signalize United States intervention in Mexico if the latter does not come sooner. Orders despatched to border commanders today make this certain. Officials freely admit that President Taft believes a crisis is at hand and this city has not been so aroused since the mobilization of troops last March. The landing of British marines at Van Quentia is taken as a warning that the United States must act quickly to prevent European intervention and the consequent confusion.

War department officials worked all night last night and today President Taft took the affairs in hand personally. He has worried and will use every effort to avert a war but is determined to protect American lives and property.

The fact that large European interests in Mexico are also jeopardized makes the Monroe doctrine loom larger than at any time in recent years. It was announced at the revolutionary junta here that a formal demand will be made on this country for recognition of the rebel government with their provisional provisional capital at Agua Prieta.

Rebel leaders here claim that the ultimatum sent to Diaz and the rebels last night by President Taft amounts to an informal recognition of the rebel cause.

Washington, April 15.—President Taft is determined that battles between Mexican federalists and insurgents shall not be fought on American soil. He is equally determined that the lives of American non-combatants shall not be endangered by the forces of President Diaz and those of General Madero. Future combats between the rebels and the forces of the Mexican government must not be fought out so close to the American line as to put in jeopardy the lives and property of Americans.

Through the state department, the president last night notified the Mexican government that it must see to it in the future that no such unfortunate incident as that at Agua Prieta, near Douglas, Ariz., when two Americans were killed and eleven wounded, be allowed to occur. Through the war department and through the department of justice the president sent the same sort of warning to the leader of the insurgents at Agua Prieta. The view was expressed at the White House last night that these warnings will be obeyed to the letter and that no more battles will be fought in the vicinity of the boundary.

Neither the president nor any of his advisers, whom he called into consultation was inclined to regard the incident at Agua Prieta as a forerunner of anything more serious, but they did conclude that it must not be repeated.

The president knows that some of the American spectators at Thursday's affair near Douglas were eager to see the fight and might have got too close to the engaged forces, but he has been informed also that a warning was given to the insurgents, at least, not to get too close to the United States. Hereafter this government expects both the insurgents and the Mexican federalists (Continued on Page 2, Col. 4.)

Remedies are Needed
Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, extracted from native medicinal roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliouness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Belching of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other intestinal Derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

Report of the Department of Physical Training for the Year Ending March, 1911.

Any one who thinks that things have been dead in the town, this winter, should give close attention to the following figures, and the figures have not been enlarged upon. The exact attendance has been taken day after day throughout the year. There is no comparison between this year's work and last year's work. Every class has increased this year in enrollment and attendance.

Three new classes were started and continued throughout the year. The male class being composed of small boys between 8 and 12 years old. This class meets twice a week and are put through exercises that are suitable for them. They are also taught to swim.

Another new class is the High School class. This class is composed of members of the High School. Company and meets every Tuesday and Friday night. It is composed of a number of boys. Also a new swimming class was held during the winter on two nights of the week. During the winter eight basketball games were organized, with 200 players taking the game. The number of organized basketball games was 27. The regular Y. M. C. A. team in the past two years has won 20 games and lost 10.

During the year three baseball leagues were conducted, consisting of 118 players.

Several hikes and outdoor stunts were planned and carried out during the year. The biggest outdoor stunt for the boys was a football game. Several hikes were used and 65 boys were along.

The Senior gym class organized this year and elected officers, and is to be a permanent organization. For the coming summer they have organized a wheel club and will take one ride a week.

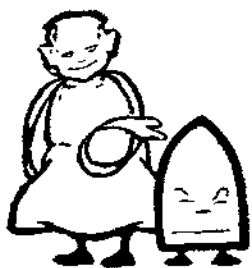

The boy scout movement of Newark started in the physical department of the association. One troop has been formed in the Y. M. C. A. and two more troops are being formed now. The physical department has secured Rev. Holcombe to take the second troop in the west end of the city, and Mr. Hurlbath has already the third troop, organized in the First Church of Christ. It is hoped that the physical department can secure a large number of scout masters during the coming year. Also the first troop to start in Granville was organized by the physical department of the Newark association.

The attendance of the various classes during the year follows:
Business Men's class ..... 1519
Senior class ..... 953
Intermediate class ..... 709
High School class ..... 2187
Grade School class organized last two months of year ..... 3108
Holophone class ..... 260
Cafet class ..... 251
Number taking individual exercises ..... 2200

The total number taking exercise in the gymnasium during the year was 11,159. The attendance of those taking regular lessons in swimming was 400. The attendance of those taking regular outdoor exercise during the year was 2474. The number of baths taken was 12,219.

Respectfully submitted,
H. DAVIS, Chairman,
W. J. LIVINGSTON,
Physical Director.

GIRL CHOOSES DEPORTATION WITH FATHER

Houston, Tex., April 15.—Preferring to sacrifice a comfortable home and an education in the United States in order that she may be near and care for her father in his declining years, a pretty Russian girl of 21 years took passage on a German steamer, classed among the deported.

The young girl and her father were passengers in the steerage when it arrived in port a week before. Two brothers of the girl had preceded her and her father to America and had prepared a comfortable home for them. The father and little sister were sent for and the brothers were on the pier to meet them.

It developed, however, that the father was a sufferer from trachoma, which, under the immigration laws, debar him from entering the country. The officers made it known through interpreters that the girl could enter but that the father must be deported on the first steamer out of port for Germany. When the little girl learned that they were to be separated she threw her arms around her father and cried, refusing to be comforted.

She protested to the officers, declaring she would care for her father, but the inspectors were firm, and said he must remain. It was then that the little girl dried her tears, put her little foot down, and in fluent Russian told the officers they would not be separated, that if her father couldn't land she wouldn't, and that she would return to Russia with him. Her father bowed and implored her to stay, according to his fate and agreeing to return. But she refused and boarded the steamer with him. Standing by the rail of the big steamer, she waved a farewell to her brothers and her dreams of a new life, while behind her his eyes swimming in tears, stood the parent for whom the sacrifice was made.

IN SOCIAL CIRCLES

Very pretty with its Easter decorations was the dinner party given on Wednesday evening by Miss Josephine Hilliard at her home in West Church street. The table was beautifully arranged with Easter flowers used in clusters and miniature rabbits were given as favors. A delicious menu of four courses was served. The following guests were seated by Easter place cards: Misses Lucille Backoven, Emma Harrison, Lorena Miller, Clotilde Howard, Dorothy Beard, Josephine Hilliard, Messrs. Wayne Overturf, Thistle Priest, Harold Backoven, John Ward, Joe Miller and William Conner. Following the dinner a contest planned by the hostess was held and the souvenirs were awarded to Miss Emma Harrison and Miss Clotilde Howard.

The Silent Circle of The Kins Daughters enjoyed supper on Thursday evening in the Plymouth Congregational church. The circle went to the church parlors in a body and was seated at one large table. The appointments were exceptionally pretty being in harmony with the approaching festival, Easter. The circle's colors, purple and white were used in festooning.

The Oak Leaf Club was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Catt in Ash street, Thursday evening, April 13th, the event being a masquerade affair. The evening was spent in playing various games and pleasant conversation. At 11 o'clock there was an elaborate three course luncheon served, after which the club decided to hold its next meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Iden, Maple avenue, Thursday, April 20th. There were out-of-town guests from Columbus, Mt. Vernon, Utica and Linnville.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Heller of Granville was a pretty scene Tuesday afternoon when they entertained with a children's party in honor of their daughter, Ruth, the occasion being her ninth birthday. The afternoon was spent in music and games. At 5 o'clock a dainty supper was served in the dining room. After supper each little guest was given a small basket for a candy hunt. The guests were Lucille Davis, Catherine Butcher, Doris Foster, Helen Owens, Margaret Brooks, Mary Mitchell, Bessie Blinn and Josephine Brooks.

The Beta Theta Pi fraternity of Granville entertained with an informal dancing party at the fraternity home on Wednesday evening. Among the dancers were the following from Newark: Misses Marion Weiant, Bertha Latimer, Catherine Sedgwick, Juliette Besuden, Mabel Jones, Louise Jones and Ann Davis.

The Coterie club was most charmingly entertained at the home of Mrs. C. V. Foster in the Sharon Valley on Friday afternoon and the following program was given:

"O! The lovely fickleness of an April day."

Piano solo—Mrs. C. B. Keller.

A COMPOSITE STORY.

Chapter I—Mrs. Hess.

Chapter II—Mrs. Hunt.

Chapter III—Mrs. Shaw.

Chapter IV—Mrs. Ashley.

Responses—Original.

Vocal Solo—Mrs. C. B. Keller.

Club Song—The Club Members.

Critic—Mrs. Conrad.

Following the program a delicious luncheon was served the members and following guests: Mrs. W. G. Russell.

Mrs. J. Robt. Mrs. L. O. Quinn Mrs. C. B. Keller Mrs. Howard Barrick and Miss Catherine Shilling of Columbus.

The German Beneficial Union will give its second annual dance at the A. I. U. hall next Tuesday, April 18th, and the function this year bids fair to surpass last year's in brilliance.

The Knights of St. John will give an Easter ball on Monday evening in the A. I. U. hall. Stevens orchestra will furnish the dance program.

On Monday evening the Knights of Columbus revive the social part of the order by entertaining with a dance at Assembly hall. The Knights had suspended all social festivities during the Lenten season.

The wives mothers and sisters of the Mystic Chain delightfully surprised them at the M. C. Hall in East Main street on Tuesday evening. The order held a short business session and then turned the program over to the ladies. The following was the arrangement:

Duet, piano—Misses Gaumer and Singleton.

Solo, piano—Daisy Courson.

Recitation—Luriald Dickson.

Recitation—Ruth Johns.

Duet—Misses Emma and Anna Wheeler.

Vocal Solo—Miss Barnes.

Recitation—Daisy Courson.

Solo, piano—George Cole.

Solo, piano—Charles Brown.

Quartet—Misses Elsie Millbaugh and Loubt and Messrs. Cole and Taylor.

During the evening the guests presented the order with a beautiful silver set, the presentation speech being made by Mrs. C. W. Smith, while Toastmaster S. H. Beedle in behalf of the lodge received the gift.

An elaborate banquet was served in the large dining room and the menu was most complete. The committee in charge was Mrs. C. W. Smith, Mrs. Bland and Mrs. J. C. Brown. The evening was spent in dancing. Mrs. Charles Hoover at the piano furnishing the music.

The Harmonious club held its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. M. E. Davis on the Mt. Vernon road. The afternoon was pleasantly spent in sewing and a contest; was also enjoyed. Mrs. Canterbury winning the club prize and Mrs. J. C. McCray the guest prize. An elaborate course dinner was then served to the members and guests. Mrs. Art Heller and Mrs. J. C. McCray. The next meeting will be with Mrs. J. E. Evans in the Union block.

Mrs. J. H. Franklin is entertaining with a children's party this afternoon at her home in Buena Vista street, honoring the sixth birthday anniversary of her little son John Heeley Franklin.

The Young People's Society of the Fifth Street Baptist church will give an Easter social entertainment, the second in a series, in the church parlors on next Tuesday evening, April 18th, at 8 o'clock. The entertainment will consist of two plays, each lasting about forty minutes. The girls' play, "Gertrude Mason, M. D." or "The Lady Doctor," is very pathetic and amusing in turn, and the boys' play, "Wanted, a Confidential Clerk," will make you laugh. The rehearsals, under the direction of Prof. Earle Foote and Miss Joanna Brown, are certainly promising.

"Wanted—A Confidential Clerk."

Synopsis—Dobbs, with a weakness for proverbs, advertises for a confidential clerk and he has four applicants who will keep you laughing from start to finish. His Irish office man is bewildering funny.

Johannan Dobbs (Charles Warrant) the boss; John (Wayne Brown) Irish office man; Horatio Lushington (Raymond Vanatta) shabby "bummer"; Dick Sharp (Paul Weaver) talkative "sport"; Harry Dalton (Paul Stevens) the one who gets the job; Charles Valentine (Durham Plyler) the "dude."

A most pleasant surprise was given to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel McNeely by a number of their friends at their home in North street. A most enjoyable time was had by all present, the evening being spent in music, card playing and dancing. At a late hour light refreshments were served. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. John Chesley, Mr. and Mrs. George Place, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Murrell, Mr. and Mrs. Bernice Bliss, Mrs. Call. Sturman, Boner, Peterman, Sigle, Downey, Wilkin, Lucas, Misses Maud Martin, Iva Lovell, Lois McNeely, Hattie Kerr, Kate Boner, Lillian McNeely, Pauline Bliss, Mr. Leo Martin, Murrell Moffett, Dr. Dillon, Charles McNeely, Thomas Martin, Henry Froelich, Arthur and Herbert McNeely, and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel McNeely.

The Ladies' Diversion club was entertained at the home of Mrs. William Shamp in East Main street on Friday afternoon. Four tables of players enjoyed the progressive game of pedro and the souvenirs were awarded to Mrs. W. L. Jackson, Mrs. Edward Woodward and Mrs. Frank Doomy.

A two course luncheon was served by the hostess assisted by Miss Ruth Henderson and Miss Marie Shamp. Miss Henderson sang a very pretty solo and gave several instrumental selections. Mrs. J. W. Gaumerdinger gave a happy little talk followed by Mrs. Nelson Vanatta.

The club members are: Mesdames George Glaunsinger, J. W. Gaumerdinger, J. H. Sharritt, W. L. Jackson, J. P. Burch, Edward Woodward, Link Russell, Frank Doomy, M. J. Downey, J. P. Lamb, Guy Huffman, Edwin Kelley, George Jones, Clark Cochran, Nelson Vanatta. The guest of the club was Mrs. Jennie Johns.

Saved His Mother's Life.

"Four doctors had given me up," writes Mrs. Laura Gaines, of Avoca, Ia., "and my children and all my friends were looking for me to die, when my son insisted that I use Electric Bitters. I did so, and they have done me a world of good. Electric Bitters is a priceless blessing to women troubled with fainting and dizzy spells, backache, headache, weakness, debility, constipation or kidney disorders. Use them and gain new health, strength and vigor. They're guaranteed to satisfy or money refunded. Only 50c at F. D. Hall's, the druggist."

EASTER-TIDE.

(By E. Virginia Copeland.)

"Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord." John 20:20. Oh! the Easter-tide is coming! What blessed news 'twill bring! That the song-birds are returning And the flowers announcing Spring.

But a message far more blessed Does the Easter-tide reveal, How Christ—the King eternal, Has broken the Roman seal. And left the grave, a Conqueror Over sin and death, and hell: And opened up a "high-way"— "Oh! ring each joyous bell.

Till all who sit in darkness, Shall hear, and seek the light; And level down the mountains Of Pride and Discontent, And bridge to higher levels The valleys of Doubt and Sin:— Thus make a blessed "high-way" For the King to enter in.

When the world has caught the message, And each heart is filled with peace:— Then Love will reign triumphant, And War, and Strife, will cease. This is the blessed message, That the Easter-tide is bringing:— How "Jesus has risen from the dead," And set the "joy-bells" ringing. Auburn, N. Y.

QUEEN OF THE KITCHEN.

Whoever presides in that most important section of the realm of home is chiefly responsible for the love, happiness and health of its community. Cleanliness is its most important obligation; clean, shining dishes, glass and silverware, serving dainty viands on snowy linen, give a relish which stimulates a wholesome appetite, and causes that blessing—good health.

Nothing is so effective in producing these results as pure, white, Hewitt's Easy Task soap, which cleanses with half the labor and same cost as the many cheap, strong soaps on the market. Then, too, it costs but five cents.

Burnt Almond Ice Cream. Shell and blanch some almonds, dry them until brittle then weigh out four ounces.

Chop them fine. Put in a saucepan one half of a cupful of granulated sugar and two tablespoonfuls of water.

When a clear syrup is formed add the chopped almonds and cook slowly until the syrup becomes a red or caramel color. Turn out on a greased plate, and when cold pound to a powder, sifting through a fine sieve. Into a double boiler put one pint of milk, beat together the yolks of four eggs, one teaspoonful of flour and one cupful of sugar. Stir these into the scalded milk, and when thick and smooth take from the fire and strain. Add the pounded almonds, and when cold, one pint of cream, and freeze.

Bird's Nest Jelly. A white cornstarch blanc mange is made in the proportion of four tablespoonfuls each of cornstarch and sugar to each pint of milk. This, after thorough cooking, is divided and each portion colored with chocolate, fruit, red color paste, raw yolk of egg, etc. When using eggs for the week or two preceding they should be emptied carefully out of a small hole in one end of the shell, the shells rinsed and put aside. These are now to be well rinsed again in water and filled with the blanc mange, then set away, propping them in an upright position in a pan of flour.

When the blanc mange is firm the shells are cracked and peeled off and the eggs arranged on a bed of any kind of clear jelly (lemon, orange or wine) which has been broken with a fork. Then strips of candied orange peel may be arranged round them to stimulate a nest.

Perfumery at half a dollar a bottle should always be worth 50 cents.

Republican Graft Pay Roll Wiped Out

Democrats in the National house of representatives have stirred up a nest of grafters, whose perquisites amounting to $152,657 annually have been wiped out. The discharge of these people, who held upbriested snags, will not interfere in the least with the workings of the congressional machinery.

The report of Representative Palmer of Pennsylvania, gave light on some shady situations. "During the Spanish war," writes Mr. Palmer in his report, "somebody's friend told somebody's cousin that somebody's aunt had heard someone say that a plot was on foot to dynamite the capitol." Thirty-eight extra policemen were added. They for him to follow. There will be no money paid out by him during his ad-

PLEASEING CONCERT OF THE GLEE CLUB

A fair-sized audience greeted the appearance at the high school auditorium Friday evening of the Ohio State University Glee and Mandolin Club. The entertainment, which was given under the auspices of the United Sunday School Athletic Association, was in every way measured up to the high standard of the various entertainment numbers that have been given from time to time in the school auditorium. The boys were in excellent voice and offered a characteristic program, ranging from purely classical selections to the melodies of popular airs and the lightest of college songs, with which they generously responded to enthusiastic encores. Equally pleasing was the work of the mandolin club. While the program was universally excellent, probably the best number of the evening was the sextette from "Lullaby" in which Messrs. Pearce, Boesel, Shappell and Giesy were assisted by Misses Margaret Lott and Helen Potts of the Girls' Glee Club—their sympathetic interpretation of the various parts leaving absolutely nothing to be desired.

IMPROVEMENT IS ABOUT TO START

Charles D. Lake, the liverman, is moving from the old Gregory barn near Newark Trust building, to a new stable on Clinton street. As soon as Mr. Lake's property is all removed from the building the Arcade Realty company, owner of the building, will begin the alterations, making the structure into business rooms with a room 60 x 70 feet on the second floor. Part of the old lumber taken from the interior of the building next week will be given away.

J. S. KUSTER, III, PLEASED WITH HIS NEW HOME

J. S. Kuster, III, now located at Phoenix, Ariz., in a card to the Advertiser acknowledging the recent postcard shower tendered him on his birthday by Newark friends, states that he received nearly a hundred remembrances. He says that Phoenix weather is fine at 90 in the shade, and that the heat does not bother one, that the nights are cool and the climate dry. He inquires anxiously about the health of the Newark friends, and says he will root for the Molders from the start of the season until the last tap of the bell. He sends his regards and best wishes to all his Newark friends.

Roosevelt Dam as an added feature of the Auditorium theatre on Sunday, April 29. Lyman H. Howe will again demonstrate the superiority of his organization in presenting to his numerous patrons the very latest scenes of events of National importance.

"GRATSTARK"

The Auditorium theatre, Newark, on Wednesday, April 26 for matinee and night, will be the scene of the presentation of the successful romance "Gratstark."

No romantic drama of years has attained the vogue which the offering has. The popular novel of George Barr McCutcheon has been most admirably adapted by George D. Baker, and has proven a positive hit in the theatre. It is clean and wholesome, devoid of the too oft mistaken melodramatic features, is replete with bright and entertaining dialogue, and contains an amount of high class comedy lines and scenes. That it has scored in the theatrical world is proven by the tremendous success and favor with which it has been received.

MEMORIAL AT COLLEGE

Mrs. Johanna Gadsby, prima donna soprano from the Metropolitan Opera company, New York, will appear at Memorial hall, Columbus, on Monday evening, April 24th in a delightful program.

ORPHEUM

Be sure and see Capt. Brunswick's Wild West company next week. April 27 at the popular Arcade theatre—a group of real Indians and cowboys, in a new western comedy sketch, entitled "The Tenderfoot's Troubles." Manager Barrett announces that this is not a company of actors representing Indians and cowboys, but a troupe of real full-blooded Indians and cowboys appearing on the stage at the Orpheum theatre. Capt. Brunswick found them in the far West. They will dress and act natural, just as you would see them today in their native land. This is one of the novelties of the season. There will be other added attractions on the bill that will be especially pleasing to the Newark theatre-going public. Reilly, Clayton and Reiff will be a treat for all music lovers, in a classy comedy, singing and dancing act, direct from the United Time where they have just closed a most successful tour. Miss Leah Stanley, a very clever singing comedienne, will more than please you in the latest songs hits of the season, such as "Taig of Shamrock," "Peek-a-booo," "Woon, Peek-a-booo," "Some of These Days," and "I Won't Powder My Nose." Be sure and come to the Orpheum and you will be entertained. Orpheum-oscope will have a feature film.

PASSION PLAY

The first day's performances, Friday afternoon and evening, of original Pathes hand-colored "Passion Play," or life of Christ, at Taylor hall, V. M. C. A., was a success in broadest sense. Without competent direction the greatest artists would appear to poor advantage, and yet the care-free amateur is inclined not only to overlook the necessity for direction, but even to resent it. However, the Knights of Pythias players have wisely and fortunately secured the services of Mr. John Stroupe, who is not only a good actor, but a stage manager of fine experience, and for this reason a performance of far more than amateur grade may reasonably be expected. Mr. Stroupe will play the leading part of Damon, made famous by such great actors as Macready, Forrest and Robert Downey.

The drama of "Damon and Pythias" was first produced May 28, 1821. It was written by John Banim, of Ireland, then a young man, and who afterward became celebrated by a series of novels under the title of the "O'Hara Tales." From the fact that the play underwent the revision of the celebrated orator, Shelley, who was himself at that time a writer of plays, it was for some time supposed to be his production. The story of Damon and Pythias is familiar to every school boy, and it has not been essentially altered in the present play. Other dramas upon the subject exist, some written before the time of Shakespeare.

There are crudities in the play showing it to be the work of a young author. The language is often overstrained and unpollished, and it is indebted to its fine situations for nearly all its success. But these are we think, sufficient to render the piece always an attractive one, when it has the advantage of a Damon like Stroupe. The latter has made the part essentially his own. Nothing can be more intensely exciting in the way of acting that his frenzy when he finds that his freedman Lucullus has slain his horse with a view of saving his life. As he seizes upon the trembling culprit, with the words— "Tis only far as yonder yawning Gulf—"

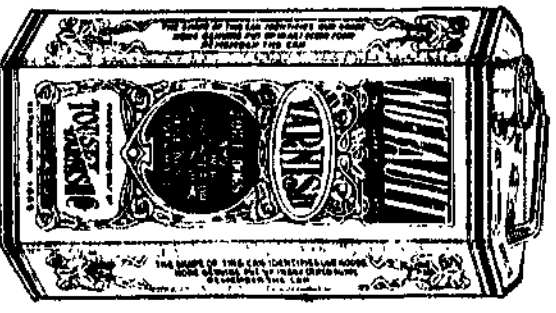

"I'll throw thee with one swing to Tartarus"—and bears him off the stage, he seems abundantly able as well as disposed to carry his threat into execution. The closing scene, where he appears in season to rescue Pythias, is also unsurpassed in energy and effect.

"LOVE'S YOUNG DREAM."

Married life is a veil secret to those who first enter into this sacred condition. Courtship is a dream of bliss, but when the realities of marriage come and an increasing household is recorded by the years, economies of time, labor and money become necessary.

The cheerful, smiling bride should not become a drudge—and she need not. Cleaning up of laundry work, dishes, woodwork, kitchen utensils and all the other necessary forms of washing can be made easy with Hewitt's Easy Task soap, which costs no more than the cheap kind—five cents for a liberal cake—pure white.

OBITUARY

MARTHA SEYMOUR COMAN.

Martha Seymour Coman, widow of Levi Parsons Coman formerly of Newark, died at the home of her son-in-law, John Martin Coburn, in La Grange, Illinois, on April 12th, 1911.

Mrs. Coman was the daughter of Nathan Holly Seymour of Stamford, Connecticut, one of the early residents of Newark. With his wife, Martha Wynkoop Seymour, and their daughter, Martha, Mr. Seymour drove across the Alleghenies to the pioneer village of Newark, bringing a stock of dry goods with which to set up a store.

He was a man of sterling integrity, and large minded patriotism, ready to contribute in time and money to every progressive interest. When a private school for boys was opened in Newark, he welcomed the first teacher, Levi Parsons Coman, fresh from Hamilton college, and later gave him the hand of his beloved elder daughter, Mrs. Coman.

Inherited her father's energy and public spirit. When her husband went into the Civil War with a volunteer company of his own uniting, she did not protest, but cheerfully assumed the responsibility of caring for their little family.

When Captain Coman returned from the army invalided, she gladly acquiesced in the plan for transferring their home to the farm near Hanover which was her share of the Seymour estate. The country never seemed to her lonely or uninteresting because her love of nature—flowers, birds and animals—gave her abundant occupation.

There were spent twenty happy years and there six children, William Seymour, Charles Wynkoop, Katherine Ellis, Susan Elizabeth, Harriet Ide, and Edward Morris, were reared under healthful, normal conditions. Many Newark friends will remember pleasant summer days spent at the old Hollister place.

When the children had grown and had gone out into the world, the farm was sold and Mr. and Mrs. Coman moved back to Newark, having bought and remodeled the Miller place on Buena Vista street, as a home for their old age. Here their son Charles and their daughter Susan were married and here a grandchild, Martha Elizabeth Coburn was born. Here, too, in the winter of 1889, the husband and father died, after two years of invalidism during which he was tenderly cared for by his loyal and strong-hearted wife, left now quite alone. Mrs. Coman sold the Newark place and thereafter made her home with Mrs. Coburn or with the eldest daughter, Katharine.

The family moved to Chicago in 1891. Seymour Coman, the eldest son is in business in that city. Charles, who married Mary Merriam of Cambridge, Mass., in 1884, has lived for the past sixteen years in California. Katharine has been for thirty years on the faculty of Wellesley college. Harriet married in 1894 William Cornell of Franklin county, Ohio, and died two years later.

Edward married, in 1893, Luella Shellabarger and is living in Saffordville, Kansas. There are seven grandchildren surviving—Merriam, Caroline, Harriet, Ellis and Edward, the children of Charles and Mary Coman, Katharine Ellis, daughter of John Martin and Susan Coburn, and Morris Shellabarger, son of Edward and Ella Coman.

And decide for yourself. Here is one case of it:

P. B. Pritchett, 406 Wilson street, Newark, O., says: "It is worth considerable to any resident of Newark to know about Doan's Kidney Pills. When they cure, they do so permanently. I suffered from kidney trouble in 1899 and at that time I used Doan's Kidney Pills. I was pleased to publicly testify to the effect that they cured me and at this time I willingly corroborate my former statement."

TWO ECLIPSES

There will be no eclipse of the moon during the year 1911. This is the first time in many years that pale Luna has not hidden her face once at least during the year. There will be, however, two eclipses of the sun in 1911, and one will be visible in Newark and all parts of the United States excepting the extreme northeast corner. The visible eclipse will occur about April 21, and will be a total eclipse—the entire disc of Old Sol will be in shadow. The path of totality will not include Ohio, however, and but part of the eclipse will be visible here. An annual eclipse of the sun will be on Oct. 23, and will be visible only in Asia, the Philippine Islands, Australia, the northern part of Zealand and the Pacific ocean.

Many requests from Catarrh sufferers who use Catarrh Remedy have caused us to put on Liquid Cream Balm, the only remedy for Catarrh which can always be depended on. In power to allay inflammation, to cleanse the diseased air passages, to promote free natural breathing, the two forms of Cream Balm are alike. Liquid Cream Balm is sold by all druggists for 25 cents, including carrying tube. Mailed by J. B. Bros., 56 Warren Street, New York.

Rub on Begg's Mustardine and you rub out the soreness in double quick time.

You know how a good old fashioned mustard plaster draws out the inflammation.

Begg's Mustardine will do the work quicker and without any dirtiness or blistering. It's better than any liniment. T. J. Evans guarantees it to do so, or money back. He also sells lots of Mustardine for giving instant relief in headache, earache, toothache, pain in back and swollen joints and rheumatism.

A 25 cent box will do the work of 40 mustard plasters. Mail orders filled by J. A. Begg Co., Rochester, New York.

JACOB F. KELLER WAS VICTIM OF BRIGHT'S DISEASE

Well Known Farmer Died at Home of Sister Friday Night at Nine O'Clock.

Mr. Jacob F. Keller, one of the most prominent farmers of Licking county, probably better known throughout the United States than any other farmer in Licking county, died at the home of his sister, Mrs. M. S. King, in the Sharon Valley, Friday night at 9 o'clock, after an illness of six weeks with acute Bright's disease.

The deceased had one of the best improved farms in Licking county, "Lindenwald," three miles north of Newark, but when he was taken ill he went to his sister's home, where he received the best care possible.

The deceased was the second son of D. D. and Amanda Keller, and was born in 1856, being 54 years old at the time of his death. He had always lived on the old homestead north of Newark, having purchased the interest of his brothers and sisters at the division of the estate. On account of the very desirable location of the land and the excellent quality of the soil, he was obliged to pay a large sum for the place. He bore the reputation of being a hard worker, both on the farm and in various other lines. His well known business qualities were due to early responsibilities, as well as to natural qualifications, his father having died when he was six years old. Following this the widowed mother managed the two farms belonging to the estate until he was 14 years old, when she relegated the entire management to him. The work was difficult, but he was eminently successful for one of his age.

In 1879 Mr. Keller married Carrie L., a daughter of H. W. Hobart of Granville township. Two daughters and a son were born to them, Ida May, who died in childhood, and Howard and Nellie.

Mr. Keller always ranked foremost in his calling. His superior methods of farming (many of them original with himself) and the deep interest he took in agriculture in general, together with the sacrifices he made for the improvement of the agricultural classes, won for him more than a local reputation, and he was known as a lecturer at farmers' meetings and as a forcible and able writer for the agricultural papers. He was a regular contributor to several farm journals. He also created a fine reputation of modern architecture, with every conceivable, on his farm.

The deceased is survived by his son, Howard, of P. O. Box, Columbus, and his daughter, Mrs. Helen Ramsey, of Columbus, and his grandchildren, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Hobart, of the home of his sister, Mrs. King, in the Sharon Valley. Monday morning at 10 o'clock, the services being conducted by Rev. Mr. Bennett, pastor of the Fifth Street Baptist church of this city. The funeral will be under the auspices of Minnewa Tribe, No. 51, Red Men. The interment will be made in the Welsh Hills cemetery.

The reports from the rural districts are to the effect that the country roads are in a most deplorable condition and that in some places they are almost impassable. The incessant rains have softened the ground so that the least weight will sink into the mire several inches.

Ex-Deputy Sheriff Thomas H. Jones has rented his farm in the Welsh Hills and will soon move to Kenton. On the afternoon of April 15 he will have a public sale.

A big camping party, consisting of young ladies from Shepherdson college and young men from Denison, loaded with baskets of provisions and camp equipment, went out to the woods Saturday morning and had breakfast. This was rushing the season a little, but all had a fine time.

The Ohio Electric Railway company is engaged in making some improvements on its Granville division. A large number of track men at different points along the line of road, are engaged in putting down new ties, and otherwise improving the track. In time the Newark and Granville road will be one of the best in the state. It now is one of the best paying roads on the system.

It looks as though Centerville, on the Newark and Granville road, some mile east of Granville, is to have a healthy growth this spring, and that it will soon be a good sized town by itself. It already boasts a fine little grocery owned by Mr. John Dooley, who is a tip-top gentleman in every sense of the word. John sees something ahead and is preparing for it.

RUNAWAY YOUNGSTERS AT GRANVILLE

Caused Excitement and Citizens Turned Out to Assist in the Search.

Granville, O. April 15.—For several hours Friday night there was great excitement among the residents of Granville, occasioned by the disappearance of two small boys, and nearly the entire population of the village turned out in search of the youngsters. The missing boys were Freeman Haskins, the eight-year-old son of the Rev. E. E. Haskins, and Thomas Hite, a little boy aged about nine years. It seems that the boys had been at school Friday morning, and after that all trace of them was lost. The searching party remained out until a late hour Friday night, scouring the entire country in the vicinity of Granville, but no trace of the missing lads could be found. Finally Mr. Haskins went down to Newark, where he finally got on the trail of the boys and soon located them. He returned to Granville on the 9:30 o'clock car with the boys. It appears that the lads wanted to get out in the world and thought that a big portion of it lay in Newark.

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Conley of Bucyrus, O., who have been visiting relatives and friends in this vicinity for some days, returned to their home Saturday, having had a most delightful visit.

Easter will be observed in all the churches of Granville, with elaborate programs of special music, beautiful decorations and appropriate sermons. At the Baptist church especially, will there be beautiful services. The Denison Glee club will sing several numbers and the music throughout will be of a high order, being especially prepared for the occasion. At the Methodist church the choir will give a short Easter cantata, "The Risen King," by P. A. Schaefer, on Sunday evening.

"This is the Day That the Lord Hath Made." The story of the resurrection is then told in song by means of choruses, trios and solos. The chorus, "To Him Who Loves Us," brings this ten-part cantata to a close. At St. Luke's Episcopal church the services in the morning at 10 o'clock will be appropriate to the day. The day will be suitably observed at the Presbyterian church with special music, appropriate decorations and a sermon from Job 14:14. The evening worship will be at seven o'clock as formerly.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union held its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Carson, on Main street, Friday afternoon and it was largely attended. Much business of importance was transacted.

The Ladies Aid Society held a very successful Easter market in the parlors of the Methodist church Saturday afternoon.

The condition of Mrs. Elizabeth Marlow, wife of Mr. J. P. Marlow, who underwent an operation at the hands of Dr. Baldwin at the Grant Hospital in Columbus, about a month ago, is reported as being very encouraging. She has been at the hospital ever since the operation, where she has received the best of attention, and it looks as though she will be able to return home in a week or two. This will be gratifying news to her many Granville and Newark friends. Mr. Marlow went over to Columbus Saturday to see her.

Dr. E. J. Barnes, mayor of Granville, has been quite seriously ill at his home on Main street for some time. His brother, Dr. Albert Barnes of Columbus, Dr. Barnes of Newark, and Dr. A. K. Follett of this place, held a consultation and pronounced his condition as being very serious.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—The Monkey's Story

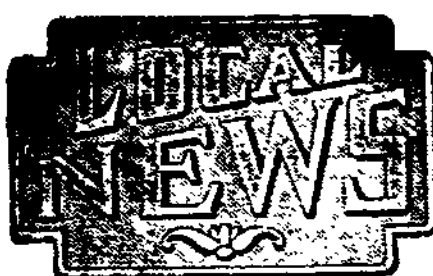

Will Jones
"I Was Upon a Big Ship"

ONE evening when Jack and Evelyn asked daddy for their usual bedtime story daddy said that he did not feel well. His head ached, he said, and he could not think of any story to tell the children. So he said that instead of telling a story he would read one. And this is the story which he read. It was called "The Monkey's Story," and it is supposed to be the story of a monkey's life told by himself. It begins: "My name is Mingo. I had a sister called Chippy. We were born in South America. We are called spider monkeys, and all of us have beautiful long tails. Chippy and I lived in a coconut tree. We were very happy.

"Such fine times as we did have! Awake bright and early, we washed our faces and took a drink of coconut milk. It was very nice. Then we hunted for birds' eggs for breakfast or perhaps caught some tender beetles or butterflies or dragon flies. After that we spent our days in playing hide and seek among the branches of the trees or teased the lazy crocodiles. Looking in the sun by the riverside. But we never strayed far from home, for our parents had warned us that if we did so we might be stolen by hunters. One day when father and mother had gone out to walk we heard strange sounds near us. Going to an open space, Chippy and I saw several men looking up at us. We started to run away, but it was too late. I felt something like a snake around my neck. I soon found that one of the men had thrown a rope around me, and I was caught.

"What became of Chippy I do not know. I have never seen her since. I can just remember being placed in a dark box, in which I was kept prisoner for many long days and nights. When I was set free I was upon a big ship, with water all around it, and with no land in sight. When we reached land again I was sold to my present master, who has taught me many tricks.

"My master is good to me and treats me well. My tricks seem to please the boys and girls who come out to listen when my master turns the handle of his hand organ, and I enjoy making them laugh. Of course I would not willingly hurt any of the little boys and girls, but sometimes when they come too close to me it makes me nervous, and then I scratch or bite. I do not like this country as well as the one in which I was born, for it is sometimes very cold here, while in my country the sun shines every day and we never have any of that nasty cold stuff which I am told is called snow. I have heard folks say that it is beautiful, but it is not beautiful to me, like myself, who comes from a warm country.

UNLESS CLERK IS REINSTATED, POSTAL SYSTEM MAY SUFFER

St. Paul, Minn., April 15.—Unless Carl C. Vandyke, railroad mail clerk, who was discharged last week, is reinstated, the postal system may suffer. The American Federation of Labor is reinstating, there is a strong chance that the mail clerks will strike. A clerk who is in a position to speak with authority says they are considering this move and will very probably resign in a body unless Vandyke is reinstated. Trouble here would affect the entire mail service, as the road from Chicago here handles the mail for the entire northwest.

De Long's WIFE

By LINCOLN COLCORD

ONE of the most interesting men I ever met in the East was De Long of Old Anjer," said Nicholas. Our acquaintance was peculiar; and with my usual luck for seeing things through, a year after the destruction of Old Anjer I ran across the woman who had been his wife, and heard the ending of his story. It was in keeping with his life. Let me tell you about it. It won't take long.

"The first time I saw De Long was when I came out East a boy in the ship Rainbow," Nicholas began. "We anchored at Anjer for mail and fresh provisions, and I was bow man in the boat that took the captain ashore.

"It was years afterward that I really made the acquaintance of De Long. I'd been on a dozen Eastern voyages then, and had worked up to a ship of my own, but for some reason or other I'd never run across him.

"When we reached the little creek, my mind went back to my first voyage out East, and I found myself looking ahead for that big banyan tree. I remembered it all; and so I wasn't surprised to be greeted by a little fat man whom I recollected as De Long.

"Come with me," he purred, grabbing one of my hands in both of his. "Listen to me, Captain. That Shute is no good. He is a rascal, a robber! Come with me, Captain," he whined. "I will treat you well."

"It was easy to talk to him about personal matters; he was the sort of man you could say anything to. He'd answer you quite frankly and volubly, and then watch you to see if you believed him. In about five minutes I began to doubt everything he said. 'You're lying like the devil,' I told him after a while.

"He grinned, as if that was the basis he wanted to be established. 'We all lie,' he answered in a cynical tone of voice. 'Whenever a mouth is opened, a lie is on the tongue.' Then he turned to me and said a very illuminating thing. 'If I lie, I also believe nothing,' he announced. 'You believe a good deal, and you do not always lie. We reach the same result.'

"I looked at him again, and wondered how deep he really was. 'But that spoils the world,' I finally said.

"While we were talking, two people came out of the shadow of the huge banyan and approached the house as if on familiar ground. I saw that they were a white man and a Eurasian woman. She seemed to be young and beautiful, in a quaint half-native and half-civilized dress. I waited to see what was up, and in the silence heard De Long swearing to himself behind me. They came toward the little veranda where we were sitting, and I turned in time to see De Long get up with a movement of irritation.

"This is my wife, Captain Nicholas," he said, when they had reached the steps. 'My wife has been walking with Captain Dodge.' The woman smiled, holding me with her eyes. I was completely taken by surprise.

"Your wife? I questioned.

"De Long nodded. 'Why not?' he answered. 'You think she is my daughter? Captain Dodge knows—'

"You are an old fool," she cried, suddenly, at De Long. 'Some day you will make me bad.'

"The captain, standing on the steps, became red-faced and sullen, playing with his watch chain. 'I suppose you're in the ship that came in this afternoon?' he said to me.

"I nodded. 'If that's your bark in the Roads, she's a beauty,' I answered.

"Yes," he said, evidently pleased. 'Bark Ceylon. She sails like a witch. Won't you come off to supper with me?'

"No thank you," I snapped. 'I'd taken a violent dislike to the man. He was soft and gross, and his eyes watered.'

"Well, then, I'll be moving," he said. 'Good-by, De Long. Good-by, Misses.'

"She had turned away with a gesture of invitation: Womanlike, she'd taken the opposite tack. too. 'Go!' she cried. 'You make trouble. Never come again.'

"That scared De Long; he saw himself losing trade. 'Take no notice, Captain,' he almost begged. 'There is no hard feeling. Call and see us coming back, and we will have ready the chickens of which you spoke.' He followed the man down the steps—and I was left alone with the woman.

"She was laughing like a child. 'Fool! Fool!' she cried softly. Now she turned and evidently grasped my presence for the first time. Her eyes traveled over me and finally rested on my own, and for some minutes we gazed at each other without speaking. It's dangerous business, this gazing. A hot flame seemed to gather and leap in the depths of her eyes—and I watched it, fascinated. Suddenly she held out her hand and took a step in my direction. 'You will stay?' she asked, a little breathlessly.

Nicholas paused, and suddenly laughed.

"De Long had returned, while all this was going on," he said. "He was standing on the steps and watching us with a singularly flat and absorbed expression.

"Look here, De Long," I said. 'Either something is mighty wrong, or you are a big fool. Tell me what you know.'

"He surprised me by flying into a regular dancing passion. 'Don't ask me! Don't speak of it! I don't know anything!' he cried. 'I don't care! Let it go.'

"Yes," I said, "but you don't. It's just as I thought. You're making life miserable for your wife—and more than that. You're misjudging her, without foundation."

"Foundation? Foundation?" he repeated. 'What do you want? Watch when she looks at you, and then at me! It is plain—'

"Wait!" I interrupted. 'You can leave me out of this.'

"I was but speaking in a phrase," he said. 'I have seen—'

"It was hard on the woman, whichever way you look at it. She seemed sweet, lovable, and innocent. But such qualities couldn't last long in that atmosphere.

"She came out to call us to supper.

"After supper we sat on the little veranda and watched the moon rise over the tops of the hills; and everything was so fragrant and peaceful that wrong seemed impossible in that land.

"I knew that she was looking at me all the time. Now and then I caught the gleam of her open eyes under the darkness of her hair.

"After a while we happened to mention money, and I got another insight into the man. I think I remarked that he ought to be well off—his prices were high enough, Heaven knows.

"Me?" he inquired, aparring for time. Then he decided to be frank. 'Captain,' he confided, 'I have a fortune.'

The woman laughed in a low voice at his side. 'Show it to the captain,' she said.

"De Long got up and came over beside my chair. He was fumbling at the buttons on the front of his coat.

"Feel here—here," he said. He'd unbuttoned his waistcoat and guided my hand along the lining. I felt lumps—some heavy substance. 'What is it?' I asked.

"Gold," he said. 'Feel here.'

"I touched a leather pocket sewed into his vest. 'Diamonds!' he whispered. I couldn't believe him for a minute. 'Diamonds!' I exclaimed.

"Heavens!" I marveled. 'I should think you'd die in this hot weather, juggling that around. Why don't you put it in a bank?'

"He shot a glance at me out of his cunning, secretive eyes. 'Too many banks have I soon broke,' he said, waving his hands with a gesture expressing dissolution. 'No! I will my own bank be.'

"The woman on the floor laughed again, a childish laugh of pure animal amusement. 'He sleeps with it,' she said.

"Quite a number of years passed before the opportunity of seeing them again came my way; but when I did finally reach Old Anjer for another visit, it was as if the world hadn't moved while I'd been gone.

De Long met me at the landing and ushered me through the aisles of the banyan to his house. He didn't seem any older; the banyan had always been so tremendous that if it had grown it was impossible to mark it; and when we reached the house, the woman stood on the veranda, as young and pretty as I remembered her. She greeted me in a disinterested manner—the coolness of it struck me at once.

"The woman, as I said, was indifferent. Not that I wanted it otherwise; but in my heart I suppose that I was a little piqued at her attitude. I imagined that she scorned me. You see, I'd rather disappointed her once before. No doubt she thought me foolish, or priggish—or perhaps she didn't think of me at all. It hurts to be passed over by a woman.

"After supper we sat on the same little veranda and blew smoke into the silent night. The woman didn't come out as she had done the time before, and finally I asked De Long where she was. He struck the veranda railing with his clenched fist and swore. 'How do I know?' he cried. 'She went toward the shore.' His words brought back the past; it seemed inconceivable that the old suffering of hearts had been going on in that solitude.

"I made a feeble effort to switch him off to some other topic. 'Is Shute still in the business over there?' I asked, nodding my head to the store across the way.

"It was the very thing I shouldn't have said! De Long leaped up like a madman, and launched a string of filthy names in the direction of the rival ship chandlery. 'The young devil! My wife—' he cried incoherently. He shook his fists into the moonlight, apparently speechless. 'Shute has sold the business,' he explained after a while. 'Shute was a good man, respectable and with a wife. We had trouble, certainly, but honorable trouble. Shute was a good man. Also a good pilot. We fought for business, not for wives. Now comes his successor, this dog of hell—'

He choked, and sat down in a heap.

"Why don't you let him have her?' I asked.

"His face grew years older. 'No,' he answered. 'He does not want her. He does not love her. He would be bad.' I felt his fingers drumming on my knee with a machine-like beat. 'See,' he said. 'She loves him. He has stirred her love. For a month I have seen it. That, and more. Am I a fool, Captain, that I know not men? Love? Pah! Oh, he is young, fiery, unmarried—perhaps he loves her a little. Not so much. That is not love! Ah, I know men! I can read the eye when he looks at me. It is me he loves.'

"You?" I exclaimed, not catching the point.

"Me," said De Long, tapping his waistcoat significantly. 'My fortune! My life! They shall not have it! I will live many years,' he cried.

"I looked at him in amazement. He could see her with other men and let it pass; but he'd fight all right, if something threatened his fortune! Somehow, I understood him through and through. A despicable man—but very interesting. I wonder if I make him plain?

"Do you really care for her happiness?' I asked.

"I have done all possible," he said. 'I have kept silent. I have been good.'

"Why don't you give him some of your money to take her away?' I went on. 'Then they'd both be satisfied.'

"No, no," he cried. 'Not a dollar! They shall not have it! I will live!'

"They'll probably kill you the first chance they get," I answered.

"Doubtless," he said phlegmatically. 'For two weeks have I feared to eat. I am prepared.' He relapsed into silence, and the argument seemed closed.

"I had a natural curiosity to see the man in the case, and the next day it was gratified. While I was ashore in the forenoon, De Long was called down to the landing on business, and as soon as he was out of sight Shute's successor came out of the store opposite and crossed the yard. He'd probably been watching, and knew that I was alone with the woman.

"He was a fine, upstanding, half-breed Malay, a splendid figure of a man, as most of them are, and just the sort that she'd love. He held her in his arms while they spoke in low tones; and it wasn't hard to see how much she cared for him. You know, there are some women who show their love without speaking. It emanates from them, at a touch, at the mere presence of the men who own their souls, as unmistakably as if they'd shouted about the words that fill their hearts. Her arms clung about his neck; her eyes devoured him. I'd seen what I wanted, and so I went away. That was the last time I looked on her in Old Anjer.

"I remembered the last time I saw De Long, too—the last time I ever saw him.

"Life is no me," he whimpered. 'Almost I wish to die! The world is a good place to forget. See, even the heavens fall. God has cursed us all!' He pointed prophetically to the westward, where the volcano of Krakatoa stood surrounded by a pall of smoke and clouds. You know the island, about twenty miles due west across the Straits. It always threatened more or less, but I'd never seen it so active.

"I watched De Long as he was being rowed toward the shore after we'd parted at the wall. He sat huddled in the stern sheets, like a man crushed under a weight of years and sorrow. I felt quite sentimental about it, till I remembered that really what was bowing him over was the weight of his fortune in gold and diamonds! He was sinking beneath the load of his worldly collateral; I fancied that the stern of the boat was going down.

Nicholas broke off for some time, thinking. "And then the deluge!" he resumed, suddenly. "I was far up the China Sea when it happened. We didn't get the effect of the waves, around so many capes and through so many islands, though they traveled across the Pacific in open water. But we knew by the condition of the atmosphere that something extraordinary was going on." At first we thought that it was some awful meteorological disturbance. The sun didn't appear and the sky was positively terrifying. Then the reports came drifting in—reports of flood and fire, reports of a cataclysm of nature, reports of islands totally destroyed, of towns inundated, of sea turning to land and land turning to sea, of ships flung like driftwood against the Java hills! The East was wild with it.

"Of course I concluded that De Long was dead—everyone in the coast villages had been killed. I was thinking of him as I sailed up the Straits and approached the place where I'd seen him go out of sight among the palm trees, where I'd looked up and said good-by to Old Anjer. The ship plunged through wide fields of pumice stone that floated like flat, gray reefs on the muddy surface of the water. The land had a barren appearance, and from that distance it banyan tree. He told me that it was gone. It seemed impossible! Thousands of roots and branches as strong as iron, covering acres of the shore, filling the sky with its magnificence—gone!

"Where?" I asked.

"No one knows," he answered, waving his arms toward the sea. 'The wave came, and it was gone.' I closed my eyes and tried to picture the scene.

"Where were you?" I suddenly inquired.

"On the hills," he said. 'High! He held his hands aloft to signify a great altitude. 'The wave reached me, but it was spent,' he said, with awe.

"Did De Long get away?" I asked for the third time. He shook his head.

"I passed him in the village," he murmured. 'He was already dying. Many have searched, but without avail.' Changing his tone, he put a question abruptly to me. 'Was it you that De Long had gold and diamonds about him?' he asked.

"Yes," I said, shortly. 'So that's why you're so anxious to find him? The man left at once, and they all went over the side in violent conversation.

"I filled away as soon as the natives had left the shore. There was nothing, nobody to stay for. Death reigned throughout the Straits of Sundra; you can't conceive the sadness of the place. I literally fled from the sight of it, and tried to think of better things. I was bound to Batavia, and had to fight my way around St. Nicholas through pumice stone.

"I was sitting alone one evening in a certain public cafe in the heart of the town. Dusk was coming on, seemed as if a gigantic snake had passed over the hillside, uprooting trees like grass.

"Her Eyes Were on Me, and if He Hadn't Been There I'd Have Gone to Her."

"And you've all seen the Straits of Sundra, too, since De Long reclaimed it, since the heart of the sea burst forth again, and the palms sprang up, and the breeze forgot the message of death and the songs of mourners on the hills.

seemed as if a gigantic snake had passed over the hillside, uprooting trees like grass.

"And you've all seen the Straits of Sundra, too, since De Long reclaimed it, since the heart of the sea burst forth again, and the palms sprang up, and the breeze forgot the message of death and the songs of mourners on the hills.

"But it was a tragedy. I had been in the boat with De Long, and I had seen him go out of sight among the palm trees, where I'd looked up and said good-by to Old Anjer. The ship plunged through wide fields of pumice stone that floated like flat, gray reefs on the muddy surface of the water. The land had a barren appearance, and from that distance it

What had happened? I hesitated to ask. 'How did you escape?' was my first question. 'Had you left Anjer before the eruption?'

"She caught her breath, and seemed struggling with a deep emotion. 'I was there,' she said abruptly. 'I went into the hills.' The inevitable answer! All who escaped had gone into the hills.

"De Long isn't in Batavia, is he? I inquired. 'They told me at Anjer that he was never heard from.'

"Ah, De Long," she cried, in a low voice. 'No, no! They all were lost. All! She looked straight ahead with a tense expression, as if into the mouth of hell. 'I alone escaped,' she said, bitterly. 'I should have died also, but the fear of death was upon me, and I ran. He told me to save myself, and left me for De Long. I was mad, and I ran, and God has cursed me with life yet to live!'

"They—they both died?" I asked, clumsily.

"Yes," she answered, without moving. 'De Long, and the other—both are gone.' She struck the table with her clenched hands. 'Gone! Gone! Gone!' she cried. 'What do I care? I love him no longer.'

"I was shocked at her vehemence; I couldn't seem to comprehend. 'Why didn't they get away with you into the hills?' I persisted.

"The fortune delayed them," she said in a hard, passionate voice. 'De Long could not run. His fortune was too heavy. One wave had come already, a big wave, but small before the one which came after. I ran to the other, and urged him to fly with me. I thought that he loved me. Ah, I was blind! She closed her eyes and held her head erect, like one waiting for a blow to fall. Suddenly she cried out in a language I didn't know. 'He wished to save De Long,' she said. 'He wished to save the fortune—the gold which De Long kept here, the diamonds—'

God! I went to him, thinking still that he loved me. I touched him. He was angry, and struck me on the breast. He bade me save myself. He and De Long fought together and rolled on the ground. Then, I saw—'

"She rose and gripped the table, swaying a little as she stood. 'A great sound was in the air,' she said. 'The heaven was full of thunder, and fire streamed from the clouds. I feared death, and ran.' She stopped and seemed to be listening, as if the echo of that night had come to her. After a while she spoke again. 'I stood on the hills and looked back,' she said. 'I do not remember—I was thinking that he did not love me! All below vanished, and the wave came to my feet. It had caught him! Ah! She covered her face with her hands, and bowed her head. 'Why was I spared?' I heard her cry.

"I can fancy them starting to escape, an odd trio: the woman, light and full of the courage of love, calling on the man to fly with her; the man, stripped of his insincerity and true at last, striking her off in anger and turning to help De Long; and old De Long, fat, breathless, crazed with fear, staggering under a load of gold and diamonds, clinging to his fortune in the face of death! I can see the fight later, when the man realized that De Long couldn't get away; struggling, tearing, snarling, the one hugging his hoard closer, the other pulling him about on the ground.

"We sat in silence for a long time. At last I took her hand across the table. It was the least that I could do. 'I'm sorry,' I said. 'Did you make any search for the bodies?'

"She nodded for an answer. I saw her eyes shining, as a woman's will when she's fighting tears. 'I searched for days,' she managed to get out. 'How long. I do not know. My life was gone—with the wave. But they have searched night and day for De Long, on all the shore, because of the fortune. He, too, cannot be found.'

"But she didn't want it, remember. You should have heard her voice when she said, 'The fortune!' If it had appeared on the table between us she would have thrown it down. She wanted better things—truer things. Don't forget that when you think of her.

"Her hand lay in mine, and she clasped my fingers wildly. 'I am alone,' she cried. 'Ah, let me talk to you! I have no friends! It was very pitiful.'

"I've got to go soon," I answered, as gently as I could.

"She didn't understand. 'No, stay,' she said. 'In the old days you would not talk to me. Ah, how I loved you, when De Long was watching! I remember.' Suddenly she leaned toward me. 'But he is now dead!' she said.

"I must go," I answered, shortly. Was I fighting very hard? I don't give myself credit for it. Something had changed. I can't explain it in any other way. You ought to see. I pitied her from the bottom of my heart; and God knows she needed a friend. And yet—oh, it was impossible!

"I put my hand in my pocket and pulled out all the money I had. It wasn't much. 'Here,' I said. 'This is yours. You must take it.'

"She pushed it back across the table. 'No,' she answered. 'I cannot. Why, I loved you once! I have not forgotten.'

"You must," I commanded. 'Please—for the sake of what we remember.'

"Two large tears came in her eyes, and she brushed them sharply away. 'You are kind,' she said. 'I would not—but I need it so much! You do not know how I need it. I may not see you again.' Again. 'Can't you do anything—'

"My dear woman," I asked, taking her hand again. 'Can't you do anything—'

"Nothing," she said, defiantly. 'I shall never love again.'

"Can't you marry? I kept on.

"Without love it is hard to gain love," she replied. 'Who will marry me? I am an Eurasian. Will you marry me?' She laughed wildly. 'It is not a question,' she said. 'I would not curse your life.'

"But you are cursing your own! I told her.

"No," she assured me. 'You do not know me. I am not unhappy. Perhaps some day I shall kill myself, and then all will be well. I should die at Anjer. I was a coward.'

"It was getting late, and I rose. The use in staying any longer. I was afraid to make a scene as I left. I should have Women like that are brave. She stood and looked at me.

"Good-by," she said. 'I shall never see you again.'

"Don't," I cried. 'Please—'

"I pressed her hand, and she left her standing by the land breeze swept there into the moonlight."
